Chris Biller Chris Biller is an associate in Baker Donelson's Nashville office and a member of the Advocacy Department.

Mr. Biller assists clients in a wide range of litigation matters in areas such as health care, telecommunications, hospitality, labor and employment, construction, commercial torts, and general business litigation. His skills in pretrial investigations and discovery have resulted in dismissed claims and lawsuits against his clients, and he has obtained numerous favorable settlement agreements. He enjoys working with his clients to develop a personalized legal strategy designed to address their specific needs and desired outcomes.

Mr. Biller is admitted to practice before all state and federal courts in Tennessee. In addition to serving multiple pro bono clients, he volunteers at and coordinates the HELP clinic, a free monthly legal clinic, at Room in the Inn.

Prior to the practice of law, Mr. Biller studied finance and marketing at the University of Tennessee and served as the head swim coach for a local summer league team. During law school, Mr. Biller interned at a federal electric utility corporation in its customer contracts division, where he gained valuable experience drafting, researching, and investigating. Mr. Biller enjoys implementing these skills in his legal career today.
