Alan Moore, shareholder in the Firm's Jackson office, focuses his practice on industries subject to direct government oversight and regulation, special service public bodies and regulatory agencies. Mr. Moore has substantial direct experience with insurance and insurance regulation, public and government law, legislation, airports, multimodal transportation, public infrastructure and public finance, and economic development.

Mr. Moore has a special appreciation for and commitment to the insurance industry, based in part on his personal experience with a family-owned, single state industrial life insurance company. With that business background and his many years of legal experience working with and on behalf of the Mississippi Insurance Department, he has a unique, 360-degree understanding of the insurance industry and insurance regulation.

Mr. Moore serves as General Counsel to the Jackson Municipal Airport Authority, the Mississippi Airports Association and the Mississippi Intermodal Council. He often serves as special counsel to local, regional and state government entities on public law and legislative matters, and he regularly represents private sector clients whose business interests intersect with government.

Prior to attending the University of Virginia School of Law, Mr. Moore served on active duty with the U.S. Army in the Republic of Vietnam.
