Jenni Dunlap helps employers in the financial services, health care, hospitality, manufacturing, and technology industries navigate matters involving labor and employment laws and defends them in disputes in federal and state courts.

Jenni Dunlap is a shareholder in Baker Donelson's Charleston office and a member of the Firm's Labor & Employment Group. Clients rely on her for guidance and counsel that is informed by her more than 20 years of experience in handling a wide variety of matters concerning labor and employment laws.

Jenni advises employers on best practices for hiring, background checks, employee classification, performance management, leave issues, internal investigations, wage and hour compliance, workforce reductions, and workplace issues arising from the COVID-19 pandemic. She regularly assists clients with drafting employee handbooks, employment policies, separation agreements, and non-competition agreements, and conducts trainings for their supervisors, management teams, and human resources departments.

As an experienced litigator, Jenni defends businesses against allegations of discrimination, harassment, and retaliation tied to whistleblowing, race, gender, sexual orientation, national origin, age, disability, and veteran status, as well as allegations of wrongful termination; breach of contract; wage and hour violations; and violation of noncompete, nonsolicitation, and nondisclosure agreements. She has defended numerous employers in collective and class action lawsuits involving alleged violations of the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) and local wage and hour laws.
