Rebecca Reynolds focuses her practice on litigation matters across various industries, including construction, real estate, automotive, and financial services.

Ms. Reynolds is an associate located in Baker Donelson's Orlando office and a member of the Advocacy Department. She assists clients throughout Florida's state and federal courts in matters such as contract disputes, breach of contract, lease enforcements, warranty litigation, and construction litigation. Ms. Reynolds also assists clients obtaining Public Assistance funding from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), including providing regulatory compliance advice with respect to procurement under federal grants (2 CFR Part 200) and preparing administrative appeals of adverse assistance decisions by FEMA.

Prior to joining Baker Donelson, Ms. Reynolds served as a legal intern for the University of Florida College of Law's Gender Justice Clinic, where she assisted clients with an array of legal and social needs and was a member of the Florida Law Trial Team. She served as a certified legal intern for the Office of the Public Defender for the Ninth Judicial Circuit, where she assisted clients in defending county criminal cases. Ms. Reynolds also served as a clerk to the Honorable Patricia L. Stowbridge of the Ninth Judicial Circuit Court of Florida.

Representative Matters

- Successfully defended a CMBS lender in a matter where the borrower sued to recover a late fee paid on the balloon payment due at maturity. The court granted summary judgment in favor of the lender and dismissed the case.
- Obtained summary judgment of more than $3.5 million for a commercial property owner against a tenant and its guarantor for the breach of a lease, and successfully defended against a counterclaim alleging structural defects, which the court dismissed.
- Successfully defended a convenience store in a personal injury slip-and-fall lawsuit. The court granted summary judgment for the client and dismissed the case.
