Tim Lupinacci Discusses Design of Birmingham Office in Business Alabama

Business Alabama highlighted the design of millennial workplaces in Alabama, including Baker Donelson's Birmingham office. In this article, Tim Lupinacci discusses the thinking that went into the renovation and design of the office.

"When we renovated our space in 2012, we wanted to create an environment that was fresh, providing an inviting place to work and visit, and that paid homage to our firm's and city's history and legacy," says Mr. Lupinacci.

The open layout allows plenty of natural light to illuminate boldly painted walls and pieces by Alabama artists. A steel turning wheel serves as the focal point, a tribute to Birmingham's industrial beginnings.

The boardroom was designed to honor the civil rights efforts of office founder Abe Berkowitz. Exposed beams and girders stretch across the room into clean and completed space, representing the ongoing progress of the movement.
