Claire Cowart Haltom Comments on Hospitals Buying Physician Practices in Nashville Business Journal

Facing new technology requirements and billing regulations that will mean less time practicing medicine and more time running a business, doctors are flocking to hospitals for employment. And hospitals are responding, buying physician practices in their markets and recruiting physicians for direct employment to stay competitive. In this Nashville Business Journal article, Claire Cowart Haltom discusses the level of physician-acquisition activity. "It is definitely a continuing trend," she says.
